Around the World with Michael Palin

Have you ever heard of Michael Palin? He is an English comedian, actor, writer and television presenter, but he is also famous for his travel documentaries. He has appeared in many successful comedies and films, and has won the BAFTA award for best actor. He acted in TV comedies in the 1970s and 1980s, and then he began travelling and filming travel documentaries. His journeys have taken him across the world. He's been to the North and South Poles, the Sahara Desert, the Himalayas, and Eastern Europe, and most recently he's travelled and filmed in Brazil.

Palin's first travel documentary was part of the 1980 BBC Television series Great Railway Journeys of the World, and other travel documentaries followed soon after. In Pole to Pole he travelled from the North to the South Pole, going over land through Europe and Africa, and following as closely as possible the thirty-degree line of longitude. Around the World in 80 Days was another popular travel documentary – he travelled the path that Jules Verne described in his 1873 adventure novel. He wasn't allowed to travel by plane. His journey in this documentary was on land by car, train and bus and by sea.

Is there anywhere Palin hasn't been? Actually, he has travelled to most parts of the world. He's been to the beaches and temples of Asia, he's seen waterfalls and volcanoes, he's been to the Sahara desert, he's climbed mountains in the Himalayas, and has visited many cities in Eastern and Central Europe. He's not just a traveller though; he's a travel writer, too. He has written lots of travel books which are illustrated by photographs from his travels, and are usually published soon after his trips. Seven of his travel books have been made into audio books, and Palin has recorded all of them.

Palin has been an important TV personality in the UK and around the world, and has even had an asteroid and two trains named after him. He has been unofficially named as 'Britain's Nicest Man' and is partly responsible for the increase in tourists to some of the places featured in his programmes. One example is his visit to Machu Picchu; this caused an increase in the number of tourists to Peru. According to Michael, his favourite place in the world is Pongo de Mainique, a canyon below Machu Picchu.
