A doctor for astronauts

Dr Suzanne Gill, 35, is from Australia and now lives in Florida in the United States. ⁰ b Florida is, of course, well-known for the space centre, and that is exactly where Dr Gill goes to work every day. You see, she is a specialist in space preparation and I spoke to her about her job.

'I always knew I wanted to work with astronauts. ¹ ____ So I decided to do both: be a doctor who makes sure astronauts are fit and ready for their trips to space. It's an incredible opportunity and I work with some fantastic people.'

Dr Gill's job is an important part of preparing for trips to space. ² ____ There aren't any hospitals in space, so any illness would cause a lot of problems for everybody on the space plane. This is why Dr Gill's role is so essential.

'Lots of people think it's really exciting, but it's actually just like being an ordinary doctor. ³ ____ Almost every doctor does these things on a daily basis – I just do it with astronauts.'

Would she ever like to go to space herself? 'I don't think so. ⁴ ____ Most astronauts spend their time in the space station doing experiments. They don't have any space to walk around, and they eat horrible food. I'm happy on Earth!'

Dr Gill believes she is very lucky to have her job. ⁵ ____ Thankfully, my parents supported my decision to study medicine. If they hadn't, I wouldn't be here. I don't think I would have become an astronaut either – so this is the best of both worlds for me.'

- a I need to do virtual training every few months.
- ~~b Her parents migrated there when she was just four years old.~~
- c The interviews are always extremely difficult.
- d I do find it extremely interesting, but the reality is not like this.
- e If an astronaut is not completely healthy before a space flight, it can be dangerous for everyone.
- f But I also really wanted to be a doctor.
- g I know many people with jobs they don't enjoy but I love mine.
- h I always read books about space and I've seen all the space films.
- i I give advice, measure heart rates and take temperatures.
