Great service but ...

The central location of Villa Romana, the new Italian restaurant, is ideal for anyone wanting to have a meal before going out for the evening as it's within easy walking distance of most of the cinemas and theatres in town and they are currently offering a special pre-theatre deal. Upon arrival, we were shown to our table by a very pleasant waitress who took our coats and immediately presented us with the menu. While we were deciding what to have she brought complimentary bread and olives and a jug of water. Our food arrived within minutes but was disappointing to say the least. The pasta was overcooked and only lukewarm while the pizza was burnt and bore little resemblance to what we had ordered. Our waitress went out of her way to rectify the situation but we had to leave as we had booked tickets for the theatre. To be fair, we were not charged for our meal but we left the restaurant hungry and disinclined to go there again.
