My best friend's name is Akiko and she's Japanese. We're both in Class A at a language school in Sydney. We're beginners so we don't speak English very well but we love our class and our teacher. Akiko is twenty-six years old and she's very friendly and funny. In her country she's not a student, she's a teacher. When we're not in class, we both love listening to live music so we often go to concerts at the weekend. We also both play a musical instrument. I play the piano and Akiko plays the guitar. Akiko is also a very good cook and she likes cooking Japanese food. I love her sushi, which is fish and rice. It's delicious! When we finish our course I want to visit her in Kyoto, her home town.

Track 18

I was born in a small town in England. My mother, Julia, was a teacher and my father, Matthew, was an engineer. I was born in 1970 and my sister, Carol, was born in 1972 and finally my brother, Dan, was born in 1975 so there were three of us ... oh, and Rex the dog of course. We all went to the school where Mum taught maths. I didn't like school very much but I enjoyed the sports lessons because I was very sporty. The good thing was that I met Peter and he's still my best friend. Peter and I were in the same class and we did everything together. After school we usually went to the park and played football or we went to his house and watched TV. We also both played in the school band ... he was on drums and I played the guitar. My dad bought me my first guitar when I was ten. I had lessons with Mr Johnson for about five years and now my own son plays that old guitar.
