A memorable visit

Last year my friend Sonia and I went to Nepal to do some volunteer work. We have a friend who had worked in Nepal the previous summer and told us about the country. Nepal is a country I knew nothing about, and so the weeks before the trip were spent watching videos, reading blogs, and generally learning about this unknown country.

We caught a flight to Kathmandu one evening in early July. We were so excited to be taking off on an adventure.

When we arrived at the busy airport of Kathmandu, the place was bursting with people. Everyone was talking, shouting, and calling out to family members at once. It was chaos. But it was a chaos that I soon became used to. Once through customs, our visas signed and paid for, we pushed our way through the crowds and dust to the waiting taxis. The journey from the airport to our hotel was something I will never forget. The smells, the noises, the culture.

The following weeks we spent working in an orphanage in the beautiful mountainous region just outside Kathmandu. The orphanage houses 70 children from the ages of 6 months to 11 years old. Every day we got up at 7 a.m. and got the children ready for school, made breakfast for them, and got them ready for the day. I learned so much from the caregivers who worked there and from the children themselves. From cooking typical Nepalese food to playing with the orphans, everything was all so new to us. Parts of it was sad, and it was hard work, but overall it was the most rewarding experience I have ever had.

M Read the email. Circle True or False for each statement.

Hi Esteban,

How's it going? It was great to get your email about your trip. I had such a great time with you last summer, so I'm glad that I can finally pay back your hospitality. Your parents were so kind to me, and I just loved your country. I think I've been dreaming about Belize ever since! Last month Salvador asked me to go snorkeling with him, but after our day in Hol Chan Marine Reserve I feel like I never want to go snorkeling anywhere else!

So, you said that you're coming over to Europe with Sofia and that you want to visit some of the main sights. I'm glad you're going to fit Barcelona into your schedule. I can't promise you any coral reefs or jungles, but we will have a great time!

In August it's very hot here. I know you're used to the heat, but it's very humid here in the summer. I know you like art, so I was thinking that we can visit some art galleries. We've got the Picasso Museum and the Joan Miró—both are worth visiting. Then we can either hang out in the city or go to the beaches on the Costa Brava. They'll probably be busy in August, but they are nowhere near as cool as the ones you have in Belize. There's a great night life here though, so I can promise you both a great time.

I've got plenty of space in my apartment, and you can stay for as long as you want.

So excited about seeing you!

Miriam
