Different types of friends

1 ____

It's 7.30 a.m. and Monica is running five kilometres with her best friend Sandra. They run together three mornings a week before work. They also enjoy shopping together at the weekends. It's usual for two people at the same company to be friends, but Monica is 25 and Sandra is 47. This is quite unusual.

2 ____

Often, we're friends with people of a similar age, with similar likes and dislikes. They live in a similar area, they earn the same amount of money as we do, and they have similar ideas. But different friends are a good idea. First, we can learn about the world from them. Second, we begin to understand other people better, and these friends can change the way we think.

3 ____

Lewis is another example of this. He's 21 years old. One of his good friends is Gary who's 25. They're very different. They have different jobs and opinions, but they're good friends because of their love of football. They met at their favourite club in Burnley in 2020. They don't always agree, but they talk a lot and now they both think about the world in a different way.

4 ____

So, how can we make friends of different ages and from different places in our town or city? First, we can begin a new hobby, one that different people do. Second, we can go to events that different types of people go to. It's possible we need to travel a little for this, but it's a good use of time and money.

5 ____

A cheap and easy place to make different types of friends is on the internet. We can join groups of people with certain interests, or we can start talking to people on social media. The important thing is to find different people, and not just people who are like us.

4 Read the text again. Complete the sentences with one word or a number from the text.

- 1 Monica and Sandra run together _____ times a week.
- 2 Sandra is in her 40s but Monica is only _____.
- 3 Monica and Sandra go _____ together on Saturdays and Sundays.
- 4 Different friends teach us about the _____.
- 5 Different friends make us _____ in a different way.
- 6 Lewis and Gary are friends because they both like _____.
- 7 Lewis and Gary met in the town of _____.
- 8 To make different friends, we can start a new _____.
- 9 We can also go to different _____ and meet new people.
- 10 The internet costs no money and it's _____ to make friends there.
