The perfect job

Bill is only 21, but he’s visited more than twenty different countries. He’s a journalist, and he comes from Canada. He travels around the world, and he writes articles about the places he’s visited. He’s written a lot of articles for newspapers and magazines, and he’s had his own travel blog (called One Man’s Travels) since he was eighteen years old.

Bill is traveling in South America, and right now he’s in Argentina. He’s been there for two weeks, and before that he was in Chile. He hasn’t been to Brazil yet, but he’s going to go there next week. “I speak Spanish, because I studied it when I was at school,” he says, “but I don’t speak Portuguese. I’ve learnt a few words, but it’s difficult!”

Bill has traveled a lot in Asia, too. He’s been to Japan twice, and last year he visited China and South Korea. “I’m an extrovert, and I like talking to people in different countries,” he says. “Traveling in strange cities can be difficult, but things will always be OK in the end. It’s important to be calm. I’ve loved traveling since I was little. I like writing, too, so this is the perfect job for me!”
